PACT SUGGESTED BY JAPS

Hughes Demanded Scrapping of Alliance and Substitution of Treaty

By A. L. Bradford
By United Press Leased Wire
Washington—The four-power Pacific treaty was framed around the arms conference table from drafts submitted by Secretary of State Hughes, Arthur J. Balfour and Ambassador Shidehara of Japan.

It is a composite picture of the drafts presented by the leaders. No one man wrote the pact, as has been charged in the senate although the treaty in its final form more nearly resembles the draft prepared by Shidehara. Its formation was prompted by Anglo-Japanese suggestions that a new treaty be drawn to scrap the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

ANSWERS DOUBTERS

The above is the answer to the question "who wrote the four-power pact"—now the center of the stormy debate in the senate which threatens to menace ratification of the treaty. It is based on information obtained when the United Press exclusively gave America the first news that the treaty had been framed and approved by "the big three" and on other information collected since the conference from reliable diplomatic sources.

"The inside story" of the treaty's framing is this:

Prince Tokugawa, Japanese delegate, made the first public suggestion that an understanding between the United States, Great Britain and Japan be framed to replace the Anglo-Japanese alliance. He then at a dinner broached the subject to Arthur J. Balfour and Sir Auckland Geddes of the British delegation.

The British approved his plan but suggested there might be some difficulty in getting it through the senate. Tokugawa replied it might be in the form of an "understanding" not necessitating senate ratification, instead of a treaty.

Hughes, early in the conference, informed Balfour and Baron Kato, chief Japanese delegate, that this country stood for the scrapping of the alliance, and that the conference might as well go no further unless this were done. Great Britain and Japan stated their willingness to scrap the alliance under a satisfactory agreement to replace it.

Drafts then were submitted by several delegates, one of them by Shidehara on his sick bed.

HINT BLACKMAIL IN MAN'S MURDER

Relations With Frank Hulbey's
Wife is Basis for Holding Hulbey for Crime

By United Press Leased Wire
St. Paul — Police early Saturday had been unable to pin blame for the murder of Charles E. Cotted on Frank Hulbey, mentioned in a note found on Cotted's body.

Cotted was shot to death in his hotel early Friday by one of four bandits who sought to rob him.

"If I, C. B. Cotted am killed or waylaid, look for Frank Hulbey and his wife," read a note found on Cotted's body. "The wife has been getting money from me. They are blackmailing me now for money."

Mrs. Cotted, a bride of three months, told police Mrs. Hulbey is the woman mentioned in the note.

Mrs. Hulbey admitted to police that she had recently received $50 from Cotted and said that he is the father of her unborn baby. She has been familiar with him since she met him in Fargo when she was only 15 years old, she said.

Hulbey accounted for his actions up to 10:30 Thursday night, but police could not satisfy themselves that he was at home up to 2 a. m. the hour of the murder.

Mrs. Cotted said she had recently demanded that Mrs. Hulbey leave her husband alone.

TOY COMPANY OF AMERICA LEASES UPTOWN BUILDING

Carey Building on East College-ave. to be Used for Display Room

Rapidly growing business has forced the Toy Company of America to extend its plant by securing a lease on the Carey building just west of Armory G which is to be used as a shipping department and display room, according to C. L. Wiggin, president and general manager of the company.

Until now the building has been under lease of the Langley-Meyer company. The toy company has assumed immediate occupation and will open the new department in about a week. The necessity for increased space is coincident with a doubling of the company's capital stock which was increased from $100,000 to $200,000 by a vote of shareholders at the annual meeting recently.

Plans are to maintain a salesroom in connection with the shipping department. During the last year the market for the company's product has been extended over a much larger area and it is now necessary to have a place to store and display all lines of stock to buyers. It is the company's plan to increase its output of "year around" toys which are rapidly becoming popular throughout the country. While demand for toys on holidays will continue to lead the market the increasing sale of "year around" toys will tend to equalize the movement of the company's product. It is largely on this account that a suitable shipping department is required.

Underwood Warns Against Letting Country Go Backward
by Rejecting Treaty

Washington—Defeat of the four-power Pacific treaty would be a "backward step in the life of this nation," Senator Underwood, Alabama, asserted in a speech to the senate Saturday.

Underwood, leader of the Democratic party in the senate and member of the American delegation to the arms conference, signed the treaty and is a leader in the fight for its ratification. His speech was in tended to swing Democrats to support the treaty.

"If the senate ratifies the treaty," said Underwood, "I am fully satisfied that there will disappear not only any real cause for war, but that there will no longer exist the opportunity for war that has threatened us in the past two decades."

Underwood declared the criticism of the treaty based on its exclusion of only four powers, lacks force because the four powers that signed it are the only ones capable of disturbing the peace of the orient within the next ten years—the life of the treaty.

"Germany is down and out for at least the next half century and all semblance of government is destroyed in Russia," Underwood said.

LARGE ADDITION TO BE BUILT TO BAPTIST CHURCH

New Sunday School Plant, Pipe
Organ and Other Features
Included in Plans

Enlarged seating capacity and a modern 2-story Sunday school plant with ample social facilities are included in tentative plans adopted by the building committee of the First Baptist church for remodeling its edifice on Appleton-st.

Harry Jones of Minneapolis, architect in charge of the work was in the city to confer with the committee and submitted two sets of plans, one of which was adopted with a few minor changes. A new pipe organ and steeple heating plant are included in the specifications.

A narthex is to be added at the east end of the auditorium, bringing the building closer to Appleton-st. This will be an addition with seating capacity for 100 and may be closed off from the present auditorium by sliding or folding doors. This room also will be suitable for midweek meetings, conferences and small gatherings.

BUILD NEW ENTRANCE

A new entrance is to be built with the outer doorway at the sidewalk level. The steps will be within and will lead to a lobby with doors opening into the auditorium and into the narthex.

A new 2-story unit, 60 by 34 feet is to be added at the west end of the present building for the Sunday school. It will contain enough class rooms for all departments and an assembly room. The young people are to have a large, cozy social room in the new structure and there will be a rest room, a well furnished reception room, and a pastor's study.

KITCHEN INCLUDED

A well-equipped kitchen is included in the second floor plan, with the Sunday school auditorium so arranged that it can be thrown open as a banquet hall where all social activities can be given. The rooms in the present basement will be abandoned for social use or for meetings, and the new quarters also will permit of the auditorium being used only for purposes of worship. The boiler of a modern heating plant will be housed in the old basement.

The type of pipe organ to be installed has not been decided by the building committee. This will be taken up after the construction work is in progress.

TRAVELER EATS POISON TABLETS; IS NEAR DEATH

Ripon Man in Comatose State in Local Hotel After Using Mercury Tablet

W. W. Nash of Ripon was at the point of death Saturday in St. Elizabeth hospital after eating mercury tablets in a local hotel and lying three days in a comatose condition before being taken to the hospital. As the day progressed, doctors gradually gave up hope for his recovery.

Employees of the hotel in which Nash was stopping were aware of the man's condition but believed it to be the result of a "moonshine" spree. When Nash showed no indication of returning to normal they maintained a close watch over his room with the idea of catching the person whom they believed to be secretly giving him liquor to enable him to continue his "spree."

FIND POISON TABLETS

Finally convinced that no liquor was being smuggled to him, they became alarmed and notified the police Friday. In searching the man's effects, officers discovered an envelope containing two mercury tablets pinned stamped poison. Doctors were called and the man was taken to the hospital. His appearance indicated that he had suffered terrible agony for hours.

Nash came here early in the week to call on trade as a salesman for an eastern concern. According to stories told the police he boasted to other hotel guests that he had something which would give a heavier "kick" than the strongest "moonshine" and it wasn't necessary to drink a keg of stuff to do it. Police learned that he bought the tablets in Appleton.

His brother in Ripon was notified and came here Saturday.

SEEK GUN TRIO FOR SHOW MAN'S DEATH

By United Press Leased Wire
Camden, N. J.—Under mysterious circumstances recalling the murder of William Desmond Taylor, John T. Brunen, a theatrical promoter and friend of the Los Angeles director, was slain here Friday night.

Three men were seen to drive up to his home and later he was found dead. A charge of buckshot had been fired into the back of his neck, apparently from a sawed off shot gun.

Brunen was found some time after one of the three men was seen to enter his home. No shot was heard by the neighbors and the men had plenty of time to get away.

The slain theatrical man had been seated near a window, reading an account of the trial of Mrs. Madeline Oberham for the murder of J. Delton Kennedy.

Brunen was said to have been friendly with Taylor. He was 48 years old and proprietor of the Doris Morris traveling circus.

Miners On Strike Kill Ten Police

Marital Law is Declared in South African Gold Mining
Section When Police Lose
Control After Series of Miner Disorders.

By United Press Leased Wire
London—Boers are joining striking gold miners in the Rand, British union of South Africa where ten police were killed in a pitched battle and martial law has been proclaimed, according to a Johannesburg dispatch Saturday.

A day of terror followed attacks by miners in the Boksburg area and at Benoni.

A three months strike of gold miners in the Rand district led to increasing disorders between strikes and police and between blacks and whites which culminated Friday in widespread fighting.

FACE CRISIS

General Jan Smuts premier of the Union of South Africa announced to the legislative assembly:

"We are faced with one of the gravest crises which has ever arisen in South Africa."

The fact that parties of Boers have joined with the strikers, who are attacking gold mines at Brakpan, Fordsburg and Benoni, has increased the seriousness of the situation.

Martial law was immediately declared throughout the Rand district.

FIGHTING IS FIERCE

In the Newlands district, west of Johannesburg, and at Fordsburg, near the crown mills, fierce fighting between police and scores of miners and blacks was reported. There were many casualties, at least ten police being killed and others taken as hostages. The railway line to Benoni has been cut at both ends. The police are badly outnumbered but have taken many prisoners.

The center of the day's fighting was the Brakpan mine where 66 manager and two special constables were captured, taken over to the mine and shot.

Benoni was the scene of severe streets fighting, the police attacking a hall where miners were gathered. Many pedestrians were wounded and at least three killed.

ALLEGED WOMAN IS NEW 'BLUEBEARD'

Mrs. Clara Carl Will Go on Trial for Double Murder—Hint
Third Victim

Greenfield, Ind.—Mrs. Clara Carl, alleged femme fatale, will go on trial in Hancock circuit court during the April term, charged with the murder of her second husband and his father. Investigation is also being conducted into the death of her first husband.

State charges Mrs. Carl poisoned her second husband to obtain his insurance money and murdered her father-in-law to keep him from sharing in the estate.

Bodies of Frank Carl and his father Alonzo Carl, were exhumed in Haverhill, Mass., in 1915, after arsenic were alleged to have been found in their stomachs.

The body of her first husband T. M. Gibson, exhumed at Nelsonville, Ohio, was expected to arrive here late Saturday for examination.

Mrs. Carl's arrest resulted directly from a letter she wrote to a friend here saying she would pass through Greenville within a few days taking the body of her husband to his burial place.

STRIKES, REVOLTS MAR BRITISH PEACE

London — The Lloyd George government Saturday was faced with the following difficulties:

1. A general strike in the engineering trades throughout England, involving directly and indirectly a million workers.

2. Rioting and martial law in the Rand district of South Africa, where Boers have joined with the striking gold miners.

3. Native uprisings, momentarily feared throughout India, following the arrest of the non-cooperationist leader, Gandhi.

4. Irish factions threatening each other in both north and south of Ireland.

5. Desperate restoration of the Sultan of Turkey and abandonment of the British mandate in Palestine.

U. S. TO KEEP WATCHFUL EYE ON GENOA ACTS

Note to Italy Plainly Disapproves Exploitation of Russia by Allies

By David Lawrence
(Copyright, 1922, by Post. Pub. Co.)

Washington—America meant no threat to England and France in her note about the Genoa conference—but if warning words are found therein they must be applied to the groups, particularly those headed by Hugo Stueger, in Germany which seek the exploitation of Russia.

This interpretation of the Hughes note came from official quarters Friday following the spread of rumors to the effect that America in the note declining Italy's invitation to the economic conference at Genoa had warned France and Great Britain that exploitation of Russian resources by their respective nationals was not likely to bring funds in lieu of German reparation payments.

The truth is the United States did not aim its note at any particular nation but expressed itself on the whole economic situation in Europe without regard to nationalities. There is deep significance, however, in one sentence of the American note which probably will cause Europe to ponder. It reads thus:

HANDS OFF RUSSIA

"It is also the view of this government—and it trusts that view is shared by the governments who have called the conference—that while availing the establishment of the essential basis of productivity in Russia . . . nothing should be done looking to the obtaining of economic advantages in Russia which would impair the just opportunities of others, but that the resources of the Russian people should be free from such exploitation and that fair and equal opportunity in their interest, as well as in the interest of all the powers, should be preserved."

It is true that the United States had declined to attend the Genoa conference nothing more expressive of the American viewpoint on Russia would have been spoken. America gives as her reason for staying away from Genoa the fact that political entanglements in Europe are involved, a recognition in executive quarters here nevertheless that certain economic developments affecting the United States are inescapable. Because America believes it is to the interest of the allied governments to have the same view the American note deals publicly with one phase of the Genoa program.

Arrest Of Gandhi May Stir Revolt

Indian Leader is Spirited Away
From People—Capture is De-fi to Natives Against Further Uprisings Among Seditious.

By United Press Leased Wire
London—Extraordinary precautions were taken by British garrisons throughout India Saturday to prevent armed uprisings on the part of natives as news of the arrest of M. K. Gandhi, the famous non-cooperative leader, spread through the country.

In the big cities where extra British troops were on duty quiet was reported.

The famous Indian leader was quietly arrested at Ahmedabad, 300 miles from Bombay and spirited away to prevent attacks at rest. The incarceration of Gandhi, who is believed by the natives to be a "Mahatma," possessed of miraculous powers is the British government's direct deft to growing sedition in India. It is a sign that repressive measures have been determined upon and that the moderate policy of Edwin S. Montague, who resigned as secretary of state for India, has been definitely abandoned.

MUTINY REPORTED

Washington — Mutiny of Sikh and Punjabi troops at Amballa, India, followed the arrest of Gandhi, according to Saliendra Ghose, the non-cooperative leader's representatives here. He said he received this information in a cable from India.

Ghose said that the mutiny was a revolt against the British government's direct deft to growing sedition in India. It is a sign that repressive measures have been determined upon and that the moderate policy of Edwin S. Montague, who resigned as secretary of state for India, has been definitely abandoned.

MACHINISTS LOCKED-OUT

FORDNEY CHEERS BONUS CHAMPIONS

Finds Sentiment on Midwest
Trip to Support Move Despite
Washington Pressure

Washington—More delay Saturday loomed up in the path of the new bonus bill.

Bonus leaders of the house received reports from the Harding houseboat in Florida, that the executive is virtually certain to veto the new bonus bill.

Meanwhile, as an indication of growing opposition to the measure the house ways and means committee has postponed until Monday its meeting to report out the bill. This was done because some probonus commitments are about.

The congressmen who have been pushing the bonus unwaveringly in the face of the president's objections and the flood of protests that have been coming in for the past month were cheered Saturday when Representative Fordney, chairman of the house ways and means committee, spread the word that on his trip to the midwest he found "sentiment overwhelmingly in favor of the bonus."

ALWAYS CONSULT HOOVER ON HUGE U. S. PROBLEMS

Secretary of Commerce Shows
Cabinet Post Can Be Made
Outstanding One

Washington.—"Let Hoover do it," appears to be one of the most popular Harding slogans.

At any rate, if there is anything to be done by the administration, Hoover usually does it, or has an important part in doing it.

Seldom does a problem involving finance, business, or international affairs, particularly if there is a commercial angle, come up at the White House without President Harding sending an S. O. S. for Hoover—his trusty secretary of commerce.

Herbert Hoover, of California, the man who was almost kept out of the cabinet by the politicians, was invited by President Harding in Florida just a year ago to become secretary of commerce—the cabinet post that ranks next to the bottom of the list. It has always been an obscure post—a political chief for somebody that the party had to take care of. President Harding had taken care of his political cabinet jobs, and the commerce portfolio was still vacant.

HARDING APPOINTS HIM
"There's Hoover," President-elect Harding remembered. "He's a valuable man and I ought to have him in the cabinet. I think I'll make him secretary of commerce."

Hoover's friends went into a rage. "He deserves a bigger job than that," they protested.

But Hoover accepted it—after Harding promised that he would be given plenty to do.

So, a year later, Hoover, who slipped in at the back door of the cabinet and was given a job that the kitchen sink, emerged as the most prominent advisor of the administration—next to secretary of state.

Scarcely a problem of consequence has come to President Harding's attention that Hoover has not been consulted about.

Here is a list of some of the matters Hoover has had a hand in dealing with since March 4, 1921:

Unemployment—Co-chairman with Secretary of Labor Davis of the unemployment conference, and took the lead in drafting its recommendations.

Russian relief—Organized and controls all policies in distribution of food in Russia.

AIDS BUSINESS
Trade associations—Developing federal policy toward lawful combinations in various lines of business.

Packer labor dispute—Assisted Secretaries Wallaces and Davis in dealing with wage complaints of packing house employees.

Railroads—Conducting a series of conferences with employees and executives dealing with wage and rate questions and matters of public policy affecting railroads.

Mine troubles—Working on plan to avert threatened coal miner strike.

Waterways—Assisted in investigating St. Lawrence waterways project in connection with International Joint Commission.

South American finance—As chairman of the International High Commission in studying plans for improving financial relations with South American republics.

Agriculture—Has taken steps to expand warehouse facilities for farmers.

Foreign trade—Recommended plans for developing foreign trade through commercial attaches of Department of Commerce.

Reorganization—Aided Walter F. Brown in drafting plan for reorganizing government executive departments.

Sugar—Aided private business men in dealing with crisis in sugar industry.

Bulk Goods In Demand Again; Price Lower

The shortage of money is causing people to buy bulk goods only said a grocer in speaking of the ever changing conditions since the war. "We have very little call now," he said, "for dates, coffee, cocoa, oatmeal or anything else in cartons for the reason that bulk goods are cheaper. During the war when everybody was earning high wages carton goods were in demand."

IRISH LOOK FOR TROUBLE FIRST, THEN PROSPERITY

Public is Fearful of Disorders
But Look for Peace if Treaty is Ratified

Dublin.—Prosperity is the condition which, above all others, stands out in the mind of the Irish as that which will rule when the Free State is set up—prosperity and freedom.

There are many fearful disorders, even civil war, of constant republican agitation, of brigandage, of various disorders when the Irish Republic army becomes the army of the Free State.

But all believe that, if the people ratify the treaty by a sufficiently heavy majority, the eventual prosperity of the country is assured.

It is impossible to tell what will follow the election except that the De Valerians will not co-operate in the government.

DEMAND REPUBLIC

De Valera's followers are essential to Republicans, and they will be forced to make their appeal for an outright republic at any cost, if they hope to retain a few seats. They do not believe there will be civil war. There will probably be disorders of a sort, probably some of them serious during the election. Feeling will be bitter in closely contested districts in the south and southwest. There will probably be some disorders when the army comes that of the Free State. The republican element will be at once loath to be disbanded. Also they will probably form an organization of their own—not necessarily active militarily.

Cork, Kerry and Tipperary, principally Cork, probably will be the trouble centers. There is great probability of sporadic brigandage.

EXPECT OPPOSITION

The permanent opposition to the Free State will come, probably, from the Irish Republican Brotherhood. That is split just as wide as the Dail. But the organization will go on with its nucleus of those of Fenian blood, who are now, as ever, against compromise.

After the first troubled time, the republican activity is expected to be under the surface, always assuming that the Free State is firmly set up.

The people are hoping for and believing in a permanent prosperity. It will be the business of the Free State government to obtain it, by efficient government, by stimulating agriculture and building up industries, perhaps even by obtaining, in time, the admission of Ulster to an all-Irish Government.

2 NAMES ENOUGH ON BANKS' NOTES

(Special to Post-Crescent)

Madison.—Wisconsin mutual savings banks may loan money on notes secured only by two or more signatures. Deputy Attorney General Ralph M. Hoyt held in an opinion given to Banking Commissioner Marshall Cousins.

Notes signed only by one person, however, must be secured by an amount of collateral, such as mortgages or bonds, large enough in size so that the "bank" might itself invest funds, if it desired," Hoyt said.

The Wisconsin law in regard to mutual savings banks is much looser than in most states, Hoyt said, in that other states rarely allow any money loans to be made by the banks on personal security alone.

"These banks are organized to receive deposits of laborers, mechanics, miners, and others of the working classes, and so are generally required by law to be extremely particular in regard to loaning money," Hoyt said.

"The legislature, however, has the power to rule as it did, even though such action runs counter to the principles on which mutual savings banks are usually organized."

"BLOC" WILL KEEP UP ITS FIGHT TO HELP U. S. FARMER

Harding's Opposition Makes
Western Senators More
Firm Than Ever

(Special to Post-Crescent)

Washington.—"The senators who have been fighting in the cause of agriculture will continue their battle."

That is the answer of Senator Capper of Kansas one of the leaders of the "agricultural bloc" in the Senate, to the plea of President Harding for party solidarity in Congress, and to the threatening structure of the Secretary of War Weeks in a recent speech in New York.

The sum total of the Harding-Weeks lectures to the "bloc" has been to make it more than ever determined to stand by its demands that agriculture shall receive as fair a share as banks, railroads and the manufacturing industries.

The bloc has before it definite objectives, including:

ONE—A cooperative farm marketing bill.

TWO—The placing of a representative of agriculture on the Federal Reserve Board.

THREE—Rural credit legislation, giving the farmer greater latitude in negotiating necessary loans for agricultural purposes.

FOUR—The repeal of the guarantee clause of the Esch-Cummins railroad bill.

Some of the measures it will oppose, even though made party issues by the administration:

ONE—Ship subsidy.

TWO—Extending to the executive authority, through the tariff commission, to adjust tariff rates as conditions may seem to justify.

THREE—Further reduction of surtax rates on large incomes in any revision of revenue law.

Although there has been no definite action taken with respect to any of the bills that may be submitted to the Senate, on behalf of Henry Ford for lease or purchase of the Muscle Shoals power and nitrate plants, it is stated the "bloc" looks favorably upon the Ford proposition and will support any "reasonable" offer by Ford.

Although in the "bloc" proper there are but 22 senators, of whom 12 are Republicans and 10 are Democrats, an equal number are found siding with them from time to time in such manner as to enable them to wield the balance on many votes.

Kellogg and Nelson of Minnesota, Cummins of Iowa and Curtis of Kansas have been forced, by pressure of local sentiment, to join the "bloc" on many votes, although they are by preference politically "regulars."

GORMAN WHIPS MCGOORTY IN BATTLE AT OSHKOSH

It was mailed at Grand Central station at 1:30 Wednesday afternoon and was brought to Chicago on the Twentieth Century limited train, where it evidently made close connections as it reached Appleton Thursday evening and was delivered at his place of business Friday morning.

Shrunk Noticeably Since
Peak Prosperity Period

Madison.—Although average wages per day and per hour paid by large employers of the state decreased only about 20 per cent in the 18 months from August, 1920, to January, 1922; weekly earnings of factory laborers dropped more than 55 per cent.

The average Wisconsin factory workman received $29.84 weekly in August, 1920. He gets only $19.32 now.

Figures gathered by the state industrial commission showed that the factory workman in 148 of the largest factories of the state, worked only 48 hours per week in January, 1922, as compared with 54 a week in August, 1920, the peak of the after war prosperity.

The most extensive wage rate cuts in Wisconsin have been in the woodworking industries and in the northern Wisconsin cities, the commission declared. Some cuts, however, are reported in practically every industry.

The average paid workmen who were injured in their occupations, as required by the workmen's compensation act, did not register as big a drop as did the paid wages to workers. The average paid in the second half of 1920 was $28.51, while the present mark is $26.95.

STATE TO HELP MAKE BANKS BURGLAR PROOF

Madison.—The state of Wisconsin took another step to help safeguard the public's cash.

Wisconsin bankers were notified in a bulletin by State Banking Commissioner Marshall Cousins that the state chief engineer's department is at their disposal for expert advice in the construction of bank buildings, vaults, safes and robbery devices.

The service was obtained through arrangements between Commissioner Cousins, State Chief Engineer J. G. D. Mack, Industrial Commission Engineer Robert McKeown, and Insurance Commissioner Platt Whitman.

No charge will be made for the service.

Toledo.—Milwaukee bowlers did not accomplish much in their fling at the wood in the American bowling congress matinee events here Friday afternoon, but what they lacked in this respect, they made up in "pep" at the annual meeting of congress delegates and the result was a landslide in favor of Milwaukee for the 1923 tournament.

On the motion of Lee Bierie, secretary of the Grand Rapids Association of Commerce, Milwaukee was made the unanimous choice of the delegates for next year.

Thursday also was Green Bay day on the Toledo alleys and Raymon made the following scores:

BRANDT'S COW IS BEST IN ELLINGTON

Purebred Holstein Leads All Ellington Cows in Butterfat Production

Segis, a purebred Holstein cow owned by G. Brandt at the Northern Farms company, holds the record as the highest producing cow in the Ellington Cow Testing association for the month of February, according to the monthly report of H. J. Lammer, official tester.

This cow produced 1,620 pounds of milk containing 74.5 pounds of butterfat and testing 4.6 per cent. Another cow, Queen, owned by the same company took second place in production by a yield of 1,855 pounds of milk containing 74.3 pounds of butterfat and testing 4.6 per cent. The third highest producing cow was a grade Guernsey owned by S. A. Laird which produced 1,289 pounds of milk containing 63.1 pounds of butterfat. This will be her last record as illness has reduced her production and it will be necessary to dispose of her.

Guy Sykes' herd of eight cows holds the record as the highest producing herd for the month. These cows yielded an average of 990 pounds of milk containing 36.1 pounds of butterfat. L. A. Sykes' herd were the second highest producers with an average of nearly two pounds of butter less.

Records for individual cows during the month are as follows:

Plenty Of Coal Here To Keep Fires Burning Even If Miners Strike April 1

Dealers and Manufacturers Have No Fear of Fuel Famine—Dealers Look for Lower Prices if Strike is Ordered.

Statements secured Friday from the largest industrial plants in Appleton which are the biggest consumers of coal here, indicated they are prepared to safeguard themselves against any advantage coal companies may take in the event of a miner's strike April 1. Local coal dealers, well stocked and able to supply their trade till warm weather comes, viewed the situation complacently and said they are making no frantic attempts to increase their supplies of coal on the eve of a threatened strike.

Coal consumers appeared confident they can effectively repel any attempt by dealers to make capital of a strike situation by forcing up the price of coal. Indications that increasing prices may be expected if a strike comes were shown by notices local industrial concerns have received from coal operators to the effect that after March 15 present prices will be withdrawn. Further notice is given that after March 15 any price quoted will be subject to instant change and orders will be taken at given prices only for immediate shipment.

MILLS ARE READY

A. K. Ellis of the Wisconsin Traction, Light, Heat and Power Company, would not say how well the company's powerhouses are supplied with coal. "We will not shut down," was the only statement he would make. The Fox River Paper Company merely stated that it was making adequate preparations for a strike. The Tappan Paper Company, according to officials, is well supplied with coal and operation will not be endangered even though the anticipated strike is prolonged over several weeks.

Stephen D. Bulliet said he believed the miner's strike will last eight weeks if April 1 comes and no agreement is reached. He said his concern is not so much to supply his customers until warm weather. Joseph Marston, Jr., stated his concern has enough coal either on hand or now on the way here to supply their trade through April and May. "We are not attempting to stock up beyond that," he said, "because if there is a strike there is no question but coal will be cheaper when it ends."

CITY NOT ENDANGERED

The statement came from the Ideal Lumber and Coal company that it has plenty of coal now on the way to fill the requirements of customers till warm weather and will not be affected by a strike.

The city water department does not anticipate any difficulty in the operation of its pumping station on account of a strike as the pumps are operated by electricity and by oil burners. The station and filtration plant are well supplied with coal for heating requirements, it was said, and would experience no hardship.

A remote effect of the recent sleet storm is said to have some tendency toward relief of a threatened coal shortage as far as local paper mills are concerned. When the transportation tieup occurred it caught several mills with low supplies and forced them to shut down for a short time. Learning the lesson taught by the tieup these mills have since ordered larger reserve supplies of fuel.

Southern Hens Depress Price Of Eggs Here

The number of fresh eggs brought into Appleton by farmers does not supply the demand according to W. C. Fish, who with other grocers finds it necessary to have eggs shipped in by express from neighboring towns and villages. The retail price is 28 cents, according to Mr. Fish and dealers are paying from 22 to 25 cents per dozen which is considerably higher than the village grocer gets by shipping them to Chicago. The market price in that city ranges from 19 to 23 cents, said Mr. Fish.

Mr. Fish said the low price of eggs in Chicago is due to shipments from the south where the hens are laying more than they are in the northern section of the country. He does not expect the price will go much lower as most of the packing is done during the months of April and May, during which time the tendency of the price is up.

PIETRO MASCAGNI

Pietro Mascagni was born Dec. 7, 1863 in Leghorn, Italy. He made a brief and singularly ill advised visit to the United States conducting two or three of his works including Oria in New York and Boston. In 1911, he made a trip to South America which was more fortunate. He wrote "Rhapsodia Satanica" to accompany a cinema film in 1907 which was given in Augusta, Rome.

Mascagni was poor and unknown when he took part in a prize competition for a one act opera. The manuscripts were to be sent to the music publisher. Sorsogno who found that a number of candidates had selected subjects from Verga's Sicilian Sketches. Mascagni who was too poor at this time to hire a piano and whose family was literally starving had selected one of these sketches for the libretto of his opera and it was he who won the prize.

Intermezzo "Cavalleria Rusticana"

No single operatic selection has ever won such universal popularity as has this famous intermezzo, from Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana". This short one act opera is divided into two parts, and between these two scenes of tragedy and horror is introduced this musical message of peace, breathing an air of simplicity and holy love. Dramatically, it does not fit the opera, save to bring into contrast the scenes of tragic turmoil, but played as a concert number, it has made its composer famous.

The selection has been made into records by the following companies:

10 PER CENT INCREASE IN FLOW OF FOX RIVER

The recent thaw increased the flow of water in Fox River about 10 per cent according to S. S. Cox, who is in charge of the second dam. The mills had been using "100 per cent water" or the entire flow for some time previous. Had it not been for the cold wave that followed the mild weather the rise in the stage of water would have been much greater. So much snow is reported in the northern part of the state that the dam tender expects a rush of water when it commences to go and is making plans accordingly.

BABE RUTH'S HOME RUN SALARY

Contemplative individuals sometimes ponder in their active minds whether the millions of dollars spent yearly for entertainment by the inhabitants of the United States is money wasted. We are a pleasure-loving nation, and those who have the ambition to succeed attempt to make even work pastime. Babe Ruth has signed a contract, according to reports, for a salary of $50,000 for the baseball season, with a provision that he shall receive a bonus of $500 for every home run. His income for a little more than six months is estimated at $75,000. Are his services worth this compensation?

The total salaries of sixteen clubs of the American and National leagues are approximated at $2,000,000 for the coming season. The sports, amusements and educational and other diversions in which the people find variety are innumerable. The theatre and quitoes, grand opera and wrestling, concerts and pugilism, poker and bridge and racing, chess and skating, tennis and gold and tiddle-dy-winks, dancing and radio-phoning. Is the vast outlay for entertainment national extravagance? Does it weaken the nation's character? Does it unfit the people for serious endeavor and habituate them to idleness? We think not.

True it is that many persons have minds for nothing but pleasure, and cannot bear trouble or tolerate inconvenience. Work and home with them are unwelcome necessities. They are unwilling to serve others, and play out a selfish, useless existence. Yet, it cannot be maintained that the nation as a whole is incapable of sacrifice or of serious endeavor. Entertainment is as imperative food. The people could not be happy, prosperous or ambitious without it; in fact, they could not work and plan and succeed without diversion. All work and no play is as impossible as all play and no work. One balances the other, and if at times one seems to tip the scales unduly satiation generally restores the equilibrium.

Is Babe Ruth worth $75,000 a year as an attraction? This is a commercial question. Whether he receives $75,000, or somewhat less, the remuneration is based on the money that Babe's prowess with the bat and his popularity draw to the games. Babe's value to the public as an exponent of clean and healthy sport is incalculable.

CONFERENCE ON COAL DISPUTE

President Harding's recommendation that Secretary of Labor Davis should exert every means to bring coal mine operators and workers into conference in time to prevent a strike on April 1st meets with general approval. Should the conference not settle the disputes, it may bring out information on which the public will be able to pass judgment.

Business is improving rapidly and all signs point to revival. Yet, manufacturing interests are not distressed with the prospect of a strike, as they seem to feel that a strike could not last long.

The occasion evidently calls for exceptionally clear-headed leadership on the part of the mine workers' officers, leadership that will not aim at technical scores for temporary exploitation, but a logical and generally beneficial adjustment. It is not a controversy that must be decided, but a condition that must be met.

BUILDING INTERESTS IN RUINOUS COMBINES

Building trades combinations throttles competition in New York city. This is the burden of the report of the Lockwood committee to the New York legislature. Exposures in the principal cities this year and last produced evidence to the same deplorable effect among the building trades. Contractors' and employees' associations have jointly conspired to keep construction costs exorbitant and eliminate competition.

"The result was accomplished by all manner of devices," states the report of the Lockwood committee, "from the flagrant matching of bids and illegal combinations between employers' and employees' associations, to the surreptitious agency of the apparently innocuous luncheon club, under cover of which production was regulated, territory was apportioned and prices fixed between ostensible competitors."

No industry needed a cleanup more than the building trades, and, sad to say, the industry is not yet purged of malpractices. Although the Lockwood committee procured 666 indictments through its investigations, and in twenty-nine cases prison sentences were enforced, quite a number of offenders persist in antagonizing public interest and in defying the law.

The construction industry, as a whole, is the pendulum of prosperity, and for this reason it must be set in balance as soon as possible. Commerce tunes itself to the swing of construction activity. It is strange that the contractors and workmen in the building industry are unable to realize that they injure themselves by wronging the public. Wise men would clean up their business and adjust their prices and costs. If the readjustment cannot be had by voluntary measures, drastic methods will become imperative.

DESERVES CONGRATULATIONS

Formal opening of the new home of the Brettschneider Furniture Co. today is another milestone in Appleton's commercial progress. All Appleton unites in congratulating the Brettschneider company on its splendid achievement and in hoping that it will continue to enjoy the success which made the new building possible and necessary.

Completion of the splendid building is not only a mark of progress for the Brettschneider company but for the city as a whole. Appleton is a finer and a bigger city for it. Visitors very often judge a city by its buildings and surely the new structure cannot be viewed in any but a most approving light. It stands as a monument to the city's commercial progress.

AMERICAN MEMORIALS ON BATTLEFIELDS

The war department has asked congress to create a commission and appropriate funds to mark the places in Europe where American forces took active part in the World war. Budget Director Dawes has recommended central supervision of the work, so as to bring about uniformity in architectural beauty and fair recognition of different forces in erecting the memorials and composing the legends.

Several excellent reasons support the request of the war department. It is almost primary appreciation of the service performed by American soldiers that the places at which they fought should be marked for the information of posterity. The battlefields should be indicated by appropriate memorials as a reminder to Europe of the part America played in the overthrow of autocracy and the preservation of democracy.

Unless action is taken in time to raise memorials at spots of great historic interest, authentic advice will not be obtainable. The desired legislation should be enacted at an early date. For once there should not be procrastination in doing what is plainly the appropriate and commendable thing, nor should the policy of economy stand in the way of prompt discharge of this national duty. We ought to do all in our power to convince Europe that we really had a heart in the undertaking of 1917 and that we did not fight selfishly and sordidly, as Col. Harvey has tried to make it appear. The erection of these memorials would be visible and ever present testimonials of American pride in the part she played in the great war, as well as of appreciation of the sacrifices made by her loyal sons.

BE BOSS IN THIS CASE

Once in a while a man is right in an argument with his general manager. Here is such a case: "My Dear Doctor: Will you please help me settle an argument in our family. I have a grandson just past two years of age, and at bedtime there is invariably a storm. The moment he is put in bed he rebels. I say put him to bed and let him cry till he falls asleep. But the mother's heart says no, that would be cruel—can't bear to hear the boy cry. Others say rock him to sleep. Still others say make him understand he must do as he is told to do when putting him to bed. Please tell me whether crying for half an hour would be likely to hurt the child. I recall quite clearly an experience of the same kind thirty years ago when I led my wife from the room, firmly but gently, and left the child to cry it out. This painful performance was staged for three successive nights. After that we had no more trouble. But now that friend wife is a grandmother—well, she agrees with the child's mother and declares it would be cruel. What would you advise in the best interest of all concerned?"

"Very truly yours," "W. D. G."

I should advise that you take friend wife on one arm, firmly but gently, and the baby's mother on the other arm, gently but firmly, and lead them positively but irrevocably from the room, once the tyrant has been duly and solemnly escorted to his couch, and let him whoop it up to his heart's content.

The first night there will be walling and gnashing of teeth, but assert yourself. The second night repeat the performance, abating no jot or tittle. No harm can come to the baby from crying to beat the band for an hour.

The third night, if necessary, wait the ladies again out of the howl room until peace and quiet descend upon your unhappy domicile. It will descend, all right.

Then when all is serene and the general manager begins to relax a bit in her frigid attitude avail yourself of the rare pleasure of saying—

I told you so.

The best way to avoid all this fuss and trouble about getting a youngster to sleep at night, whatever the child's age, is by not training the child into such a bad habit in the first place. At the proper bedtime a baby should be undressed, bathed, powdered, put in his nightgown, and tucked into bed. Then mother, grandmother and everybody should fade right out and leave the baby to enjoy natural sleep. No rocking, crooning, story telling, lullabies or other taxation upon the mother's time, strength or rest.

If a child has been bred into any such wrong habit by the misguided pampering of mother, grandmother or nurse, the best way is to break the habit.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Leading Hygiene

What do you think of mothers who wheel their babies out these raw days with the carriage tops down and the babies' faces uncovered?—(Mrs. C. R.)

Answer—Mothers are gradually acquiring good sense. Babies are healthier and more likely to survive than they were 30 years ago. Too many babies have been coddled to death. I congratulate the babies of the mothers you refer to.

The Stenographer's Back

I am a stenographer and my desk is situated so that my back is 2 feet from a window. A man about fifteen feet from the window insists on having this window open much of the time for ventilation and I am chilled by the draft blowing on my back. I appreciate that he is entitled to fresh air, but at the same time.... (R. M.)

Answer—Place a screen of unbleached muslin in the window, the size of the lower sash. This will admit fresh air yet will notice no draft.

Inhaling Lead

I am a steno-grapher, casting plates about five hours a day and trimming the rest of the time. The fumes, according to some people, shorten a man's life, but I put that down for bunk. I have been at it two years and I see no ill effects. Not long ago one of the men was seized with cramps of the stomach and bowels and a stoppage which I understand was due to lead poisoning. He had a second seizure within a year, then he quit the trade. I know he took a cathartic every night while he was steno-graphing. The lead is fused at from 450 to 600 degrees F. What precautions may I take?—(S. E. A.)

Answer—The most essential safety precaution is an installation of exhaust ventilation to draw off the fumes. Inhalation of fumes of lead in various industries is the usual mode of chronic lead poisoning, and this applies even in painting and similar trades where lead dust may be inhaled and swallowed. Any one in an occupation involving exposure to lead should be very particular about washing the hands before eating anything; should avoid chewing anything while at work; avoid smoking while at work; never eat in the shop.

Resume of American and Foreign Newspaper Opinions

A New Building Code

Although President Harding declined to call a national conference on housing on the ground that it was a local problem which the government could do little to relieve, the administration, through the Attorney General, has taken a step which the press predicts will so stimulate building as to relieve the housing situation materially. Mr. Daugherty has secured, through conference with representatives of bricklayers, masons and plasterers' organizations, a new code which modifies a number of practices of the building trades which it is held have been holding up building costs and hindering construction. The revised code is enunciated in the form of a decree of a federal court which provides for violation, and as one writer points out, "more than one hundred thousand men of the affiliated crafts must abide by it."

Just what this decree will accomplish is outlined by the BOSTON HERALD:

"It lifts the limit that has restricted the productive efficiency of the individual workman. It permits the employer to purchase his materials wherever he pleases and from anybody who has the right goods to sell whether union made or not. It aims to abolish the informal agreements between labor unions and contractors' associations for mutual advantage in boosting prices and limiting output. It forbids the use by labor of contractors or makers of material for the collection of debts or the enforcement of claims."

Not the least noteworthy feature of the agreement, in the way of precedent, "is the manner in which it has been accomplished," the PHILADELPHIA BULLETIN thinks. Although the PHILADELPHIA OBSERVER points out, "the union faced prosecution for conspiracy, coercion and many improper acts in the restraint of trade and industry, and could have been proceeded against under the Sherman law, probably resulting in prison sentences," the union heads were called in, the BULLETIN reports, "to talk over the matter, and to agree to the error of these practices" and "they pledged themselves for the future." That "these limitations on their powers were accepted voluntarily by the officers of the trade unions affected," the WASHINGTON STAR takes as "an encouraging sign that labor leaders are coming to have a better understanding of economic laws and forces."

The decree aims squarely at some of the worst abuses which have been strangling the building industry, as various editors analyze it. The first stipulation will end the "slackerism" which the MINNEAPOLIS JOURNAL says "has obtained wide currency in labor circles," by which "a standard day's work" "has been made to conform to the ability of the worst of the least efficient workers," the result of which has been "greatly to increase costs."

Under the new code, the JOURNAL believes "the efficient workman is to be permitted to reap the advantage for himself and for his employer of his ability."

Discussing the third and fourth provisions of the agreement, the PROVIDENCE JOURNAL finds that:

"They explain a good deal of the responsibility for the scandalous conditions which have existed in the industry. The testimony brought out by the New York investigation revealed collusion between organized capital and organized labor for increasing building costs. This was more or less an outgrowth of the 'cost-plus' system that prevailed during the war. Under this system the contractor cared nothing about the expense of a job. And the war practice encouraged contractors and workers to combine for their mutual profit, until building costs became so excessive that building almost ceased."

Putting an end to these means of extortion, the BOSTON TRANSCRIPT notes, "does not infringe upon the legitimate activities of the labor unions. There is nothing in the action agreed upon to interfere with the proper efforts of the unions to establish hours or conditions of labor. But the individual workman will be freed from arbitrary limitation of his output" and "his organization will not be made a bludgeon in the hands of men who would exploit the home builder and the business man."

The Attorney General declared that "the decree constitutes a new bill of rights for the home builder, the rent-payer, the manufacturer and the business man who has to build."

The PHILADELPHIA TIMES DISPATCH considers the statement "fully justified." Further, the paper remarks, it establishes "a new policy of government toward labor unions and trade and contractors' associations," by bringing these "powerful organizations" into accord with the government "for the protection of the paramount rights of the public where interests of the government must serve."

"The NEW YORK TIMES met too optimistically remarks that the decree will do much if it 'lessens the cost of construction, making a decent home once more an economic possibility,' and will do more."

It overstates the wholesome competition which alone makes stable progress possible. But the NEWARK NEWS sees a foreshadowing of a "salvation for business generally" in the agreement, with the extension to all the building trades of the principles laid down, and their enforcement, "the great building industry can begin to come up for air," and the LEXINGTON LEADER also believes that "an honest effort to live up to the rules of the new code will undoubtedly quicken enterprise and increase building operations."

With the acceptance of these new regulations "labor has done its share in abolishing restrictions on building," and the NEW YORK WORLD suggests that "the example is there for capital combinations to follow," for, as the PITTSBURGH LEADER contends, "agreement among the working-class element of the building trades will not effect the change in the situation which must come about." This decree, enforceable as a court order, deals with limitation of output and restraint of trade on the part of the workers, but has it, the LEADER asks, "taken sufficient account of the deadly fact that the workman depends upon the contractor for his living, and that the contractor can be driven out of business by the material dealers?" Instead, the agreement merely cleanses the surface.

What Paris Says About Spring Fashions

Paris.—Generally speaking, women's clothes this year, of the other than formal type, very approximately those of men in the fifteen hundreds. There is the long, loose gown with the academic sleeves; the heavy, almost mantle-like gown, weighted with broad, thick fur. The length of these gowns—for they are really gowns as opposed to dresses—suggests a soft, easy, while the magnificent girdles only lack a pouch from which to scatter jewels or gold as largesse. An interesting feature of some of these Renaissance gowns is the rather close fitting of the bodice, which is a little longer than the natural waist, or which perhaps exactly reaches the natural waist. The figure is, of course, for any suggestion of corset and the fit, therefore, is to be loose and easy, for all it is a fit. The bodice buttons or fastens straight down the middle, and is joined quite plainly to a full and swinging skirt which is very much fuller at the bottom than at the top, and which reaches to about low boot-tops. The neck is a rather narrow rectangle, the small side being horizontal. The sleeves open full at the wrist, the bosom with Anne Boloyen, the material, which is of thick-looking, heavily embroidered silk crepe—again a very masculine looking stuff—are laid broad bands of fur, round the bottom, round the rectangular neck, and round the sleeves. The dress is very easy to put on, excellently suited for the afternoon, and has a swing, when in movement, that is both attractive and dignified.

Colors and Stuffs

The palest shades are used for evening dresses, and the material is crepe de Chine with every kind of chiffon and of crepe. Pale greys are used here as well as for afternoon dresses. To avoid insipidity which might obtain in clinging stuffs and the soft draperies in pale colors, ornamentation is used which fulfills as might the bosom with Anne Boloyen, the material, which is of thick-looking, heavily embroidered silk crepe—again a very masculine looking stuff—are laid broad bands of fur, round the bottom, round the rectangular neck, and round the sleeves. The dress is very easy to put on, excellently suited for the afternoon, and has a swing, when in movement, that is both attractive and dignified.

Crepe de Chine is also as much used as ever in the afternoon dresses, and here the color combinations are very striking. Dark blue and grey, grey and palest yellow, a red that is neither quite henna nor quite brick and which can be worn by fair people as well as dark; every shade of gold and gold drab, and a very becoming all-grey with metal trimmings or embroidery which resembles old silver.

More than anything else, these are only a few of the very subtle color combinations at these first early shows.

Psycho-Analysis As a Risky Business

London.—As a result of analysing his own dreams and those of other people for the last ten years I feel pretty certain that I cannot accept Freud's general theory," said Dr. William Brown, the distinguished specialist, lecturing on "Dreams—Their Cause and Effect" at the Institute of Hygiene yesterday.

The doctor observed, "it is not nearly so important as he makes out."

The lecturer pointed out that dreams often dealt with preoccupations, and not necessarily with repressions.

"If a person walks in his sleep," said Dr. Brown, "he does not know why, but he knows that it is possible to find out what was his dream."

In one case he knew of a man who had walked downstairs from his ward in the hospital carrying a pillow. He had no knowledge of why he had done this, but Dr. Brown elicited, by hypnosis him, that in the dream he had found himself back again in a town in Sussex.

He was going fishing with a great friend when the latter sprained his ankle. The patient had filled the canvas fishing-bag with water to bathe his friend's ankle, and this explained why, when he walked in his sleep, he had carried the pillow with him.

The patient, at the time of the dream, was worried by the fact that he could get no news of his friend.

Later, when the patient disappeared from the hospital, it was found that he had unconsciously had traveled to a village, where he learned reassuring news of his friend. With that the dreams ceased.

Death Rate Slump

Nineteen twenty-one was the healthiest year in the United States and Canada yet recorded.

This, according to statistics compiled by one of our greatest life insurance companies having nearly 14,000,000 policy-holders.

The figures constitute approximately one-eighth of the total population of the two countries and probably less than one-quarter of that in the cities.

The death rate attained the low figure of 8.54 per 1000 lives. This is 13.7 per cent lower than the 1920 death rate which in turn marked the minimum recorded up to that time.

It is 31.9 per cent lower than the rate for 1911. Just what these figures mean in actual saving of life is best shown by the fact that if the 1920 death rate had prevailed in 1921, 18,661 more would have died; if the 1911 death rate had prevailed 54,942 more deaths would have occurred.

The decline in the 1921 death rate was accomplished largely through reductions in the death rates for tuberculosis, pneumonia and influenza.

Lower mortality from Bright's disease, childbirth conditions, and accidents contributed in somewhat less degree.

In 11 years the death rate from tuberculosis has been cut in half. This in itself is an unparalleled accomplishment in the history of public health. But more amazing still is the fact that the decline is continuing at an increasing rate from year to year.

The outstanding fact in the health situation for 1921 is that health observation work results in greatly reduced sickness and death rates.

There has been a drop of virtual one-third in the death rate in the 1921 year period.

This is a magnificent promise for the future. Humanitarians, physicians, public health workers can all in the crystal of these statistics find great reward for years of discouraging efforts at health conservation.

Many years of tireless work in the direction is bearing fruit. And it is most encouraging part about it whole thing is that the public health work has by no means exhausted its possibilities for life saving.

The death rates for a number of the more important causes show marked capacity for further decline.

LAWRENCE DEBATE TEAM WINS FROM ALBION TRIO HERE

No Word Has Been Received on Result of Debate With Cornell in Iowa

Two to one in favor of the Lawrence college debate team was the decision Friday evening in Lawrence Memorial chapel when Lawrence met Albion on the question, Resolved: That the closed shop in industry is justifiable. A large number of union representatives and employers attended the debate.

At noon no word had come from the negative debate team of Lawrence which met the Cornell team at Mt. Vernon, Iowa, on Friday evening. The team planned to leave Mt. Vernon immediately after the debate in order to reach Appleton Saturday afternoon. The negative team is working hard to prepare for its big western trip which begins on Friday, March 17.

The affirmative team of Lawrence college placed its main argument on the fact that there was no alternative open to the working man other than the union shop in the case of the hostile employer who would not concede any rights to labor. The affirmative team did not advocate all union shops in all industries, but claimed that the union shop was justifiable where the employee needed the "big stick of unionism" to enforce the demands of labor.

The Albion negative team brought three indictments against the closed shop which they demanded the affirmative team justify. These were that the closed shop restricted production, that the closed shop was the domination of industry by the minority and that the closed shop was a dangerous monopoly of industry. They based their arguments for restriction of industry on rules made by some labor unions regarding the amount of work which a man should do.

In second indictment the visiting team brought out the fact that only 15 per cent of the working men are unionized today and that they have been able to dominate even the congress of the United States. They charged that many persons are unable to get into the trades which they want to learn because of the rule which allows only one apprentice for a certain number of journeymen.

Besides its main point that there is no other alternative open to working man than the closed shop, the Lawrence team dwelt on the past services of the unions to labor and gave the unions credit for much of the progress in industry. They also maintained that there is a great need for the unions at the present time.

Alfred Root of Appleton was the most powerful speaker for the Lawrence team while Hilmar Fox was the best speaker for the negative team. Dan Hardt of Neenah who is a freshman at Lawrence made a splendid showing for a first year man while Earl Hunting of Racine who has represented Lawrence in debate before put up a strong case.

Maxwell Smith and Eldon Snaderon were the other Albion speakers. Attorney E. R. Hines of Oshkosh, Prof. W. S. Watson of the University of Wisconsin and Prof. A. P. Hanks of White Water normal were the judges.

U. S. TO BE DRY IN TIME, HAYNES SAYS

Much of News About Failure of Prohibition is Propaganda, Chief Says

Washington—The United really is going dry! Federal Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes says so. He admits prohibition isn't 100 per cent effective right now. But he says enforcement is improving and that a real dry era is ahead.

"This is a new law," Haynes says. "None of us expected 100 per cent enforcement at the start. Can you recall 100 per cent enforcement of any law, no matter how long it had been operative?"

Haynes branded reports of the breakdown of prohibition enforcement as propaganda.

"The amount of liquor imported into this country has been blazed in capital letters," Haynes said. "The facts show that the total known importation last year was one-half of one per cent of the total consumption of liquor in America the year before prohibition went into effect."

"The propagandist tells you prohibition is responsible for an increase in crime."

"But the crime wave is worldwide! The American phase is only a reflex. Arrests for drunkenness have decreased 60 per cent in America under prohibition. Convictions for drunkenness in wet England increased in about the same proportion last year."

"Liquor withdrawals in the United States in October, 1921, were only 50 per cent of withdrawals for the same period in 1920."

"Whisky withdrawals by wholesalers in New York in September and October, 1921, totaled less than 4 per cent of the withdrawals for June and July, 1921."

"With the federal prohibition enforcement department fully organized and every true American citizen back of us, prohibition will be just as successful as other laws that now are operating."

RADIO AFFORDS SICKROOM GLEE

New York.—You can turn your sickroom or hospital from a place of suffering to a combination theater, concert hall, lecture room and amusement palace.

All by the use of wireless. All you need is a wireless receiving instrument. You needn't go to the trouble of erecting an aerial, for the springs of beds on which the patients are lying serve as excellent aerials.

Radio amusement for hospital patients is becoming a common thing now, says a current issue of Popular Science Monthly.

New York radio amateurs frequently live up sickrooms by lending their apparatus to hospitals. A patient clasps the receiver over his ears, hooks the apparatus to his bed springs and lies back easily in bed to "listen in."

It will be easier to accumulate money if you have some worth while object in view, and always fix the date when you mean to pass the next hundred dollar mark.

We know of the self denial of many who at last have obtained their reward, and can witness the fact that their present resources are due to pluck — not luck; and to a bank account—not a pull.

Everyday brings opportunity to reward the man who has ready money.

Are Your Chimneys And Fireplaces Safe?

Of the mistakes commonly made in home building none is more frequent than faulty design and construction of chimneys and fireplaces.

Although the use of the fireplace is one of the oldest methods of house heating there are few who understand the principles of its action. Even experienced masons frequently fall into errors in building which seriously detract from the efficiency of the installation. Bad chimney design is also the cause of much avoidable expense in heating the house.

The Government has prepared a booklet designed to give the householder and prospective builder a working knowledge of the principles to be observed in planning and building these important parts of the house which, if they are properly constructed, will go a long way toward promoting comfort and safety.

Our Washington Information Bureau will secure a copy of this for any of our readers who ask for it. The booklet is free. Simply fill out and mail the coupon below, enclosing two cents in stamps for return postage. Be sure to write your name and address clearly on the lines of the coupon.

The WRONG FACE

ISABEL OSTRANDER

They came at last upon a tiny clearing, and, with a warning touch upon her companion's arm, Fay flashed the torch on a small dark opening before them.

It was, indeed, the cave of which she had told him, but the stones had been rolled away. From the entrance, with upturned face, peered the head of a man, asleep. It rested upon one of the stolen launch cushions, and the rug from the same source enveloped his shoulders opening across the breast to disclose Frank's coat.

Fay bent nearer and scrutinized the sleeping man. It was undoubtedly the same face as that which he looked in on her through the library window—the same white, drawn face, pinched now with privation and exposure, but, with those wild, staring eyes closed, the likeness to some one whom she had known grew stronger and stronger.

Then she drew back with a little start. Why, with that horrible gaunt look gone it would be like—like—Was he gone mad? It could not be—and yet—She bent forward with her agonized eyes searching the unconscious face, and then the torch dropped rattling upon the stones and Captain Warren steadied himself upon his crutches and placed a firm hand over her lips to stifle the scream which rose to them as he drew her slightly away.

"You saw?" She tore his hand from her lips.

"Yes," he groaned. "I saw, and I know that you must be going crazy! Didn't I see him die, out there in No Man's Land?"

"No!" she cried softly. "I have known it, I have felt his nearness to me ever since I came home. That man is my brother!"

CHAPTER XI

"I tell you, I saw him die!" Captain Warren groaned once more. Then he spoke with a change of tone. "Whoever he may be, we must get him out of this and at once. No, don't return to him! It is, should prove to be Will, he must be suffering from some form of amnesia, and if you awaken him suddenly the shock may kill him!"

"What do you wish me to do, Captain Warren?"

"Take the pocket torch and return to the edge of the woods, where it borders the lawn of your place, and wait. When we come out look at me, and if I nod it will mean that the miracle is true, and a frightful mistake was made somewhere. Then speak to him quietly, as though you had seen him only an hour before and had come out to meet him. Tell me, I will follow you to the house and telephone for Doctor Green. But only if I nod; if I do not, run into the house and leave us alone."

"Do you think you can manage him?" she asked softly.

"I think so. I am going to try an experiment which I have seen prove successful before. Now go and pray that what we hope for may be true."

Without a word Fay took the torch and flew down the trail as though she dared not glance backward lest her strength fail her, and the captain bent over and felt for the shoulder of the unconscious man, shaking him roughly.

"Come on, Will! We're going over!"

Automatically the man tried to spring to his feet.

"Rotten dug-out, that! But we've known worse; eh, Warrie?"

"Come on, Will. The captain's heart leaped and his voice, none too steady. "The rest have gone on and we must follow."

"Who the hell took my rifle? Say my head feels queer!"

"Never mind your rifle; we'll find plenty out there. Come! We're going over the top!"

There began a strange procession, led by a man at a steady pace, who sought the path through years of habit, but whose lips babbled of strange things, and followed by the wrecked body which dragged itself indomitably along and strove by command and entreaty to keep that half-crazed brain of the leader from disintegrating into chaos once more.

To Fay, waiting quietly on the edge of the clearing, the minutes seemed like hours. She dared not think or speculate on what the coming of the two men would mean to her.

At length she heard stumbling footsteps and the sound of crutches, and held her breath as they drew nearer and nearer. She heard her brother's voice raised sharply:

"Warrie, there's a house or something ahead. Gad, where's the rest of the outfit, and why haven't we our rifles?"

With her heart beating as though it would burst in her breast, Fay advanced and tucked her arm beneath her brother's.

He had stood motionless since she first touched him, his whole body trembling like a race horse, a low harsh cry broke from him.

"Fay! I thought I was in France! Fay—Fay, you're real, aren't you? Where's Warrie? I was with him just now. What does it all mean?"

"You've had a dream, Wilbur, that's all." She laughed, but there was a catch in her voice.

"Why is the house so dark? Where is Laure!"

Her heart contracted at the mention of that name, but she forced a note of impatience in her tone.

"Captain Warren is in the library, talking to Aunt Clara, and I—Laure!"

is resting. For goodness' sake don't stop out here on this soaping wet lawn and talk all night!"

She led him to the side door and into the library.

Captain Warren was seated at the desk, apparently writing, with his crutches carefully concealed, and Mrs. Tudor held a book which shook in her hands, but she glanced up casually as they entered and remarked:

"Be sure you get out of those wet things at once, Wilbur."

Her eyes fell again to her book, and Fay guided her brother up to his room.

Out upon the porch, whither he had followed them since, all unnoticed he had witnessed the scene at the cave. Sergeant Barry caught the captain's eye and beckoned. When the latter joined him he said:

"Go up to him. Explain that you arrived this evening during his walk, and act as if he knew all about your having been wounded. Talk so that he has no time to think, and get him to bed as quickly as you can. You've sent for the doctor, of course?"

"How the devil do you know all this, sergeant?" Captain Warren gazed at the detective in genuine astonishment.

"Oh, I was there all the time in case you needed a hand. I saw the look upon your face when you heard Frank's description of the half-burned top of a pajama coat which could only have come from an army officer's hospital, and, although I don't think you guessed the truth, I meant to circle back and keep you in sight. But you will go up now and ask Miss Tudor to come down to me as soon as she has made her self warm and comfortable? I am sorry to disturb you after that she has gone through, and at such an hour, but there is one question I must ask her before I leave tonight."

When Fay came to him, enveloped in a dark cloak, he led her toward the breakfast room.

"There is a little porch out here where we may talk for a few minutes, even if it is a bit damp and—"

She interrupted him suddenly. "Oh, not there!" she laughed nervously. "You see, sergeant, a man proposed to me there last night and I—I don't want to be reminded of it!"

Barry closed the door of the breakfast room and placed a chair for her. "Let us talk here, then. Miss Tudor, don't think me impertinent, but I must ask you to tell me the name of that man."

"Really, sergeant?" She raised her eyebrows. "Since I very definitely refused the gentleman I should not care to mention his name. Captain Warren says that you saw it all. Isn't it wonderful to have my brother back from the dead like this, even if he is so broken and ill! Even with the tragedy of my poor little cousin's death still hanging over me, I cannot help but rejoice!"

"You have been blessed, Miss Tudor," Barry replied gravely.

"Imagine him at a table at the library window that night, hungry and ragged and ill! And out in all that terrible storm last night with nowhere to lay his head—why, even poor Laure couldn't stand it, beating in upon her near the windows, and I had to chance beds with her."

"You what?" Barry half rose from his chair.

"Changed beds with her," Fay repeated patiently. "I was still awake when she suggested closing the windows, but I offered to chance and take her bed—I am used to the elements, you know—but she declined. I must have just fallen asleep when she woke me and said that she simply could not stand that damp wind blowing in across her face and would change with me, so we did. Why do you stare at me like that, Sergeant Barry?"

"I beg your pardon," he said mechanically. "I am afraid I must of felt you further, but I return to my first request. I must insist that you tell me the name of the gentleman who asked you to become his wife. It is vital to the case. I must know."

"It was—Kenneth Clayton," she responded reluctantly.

"Thank you," said Barry quietly. "Will you tell me, as nearly as you can remember, the terms of your father's will?"

"I remember quite well." Her reply was fraught with surprise. "The attorneys were here only last week to go into the details of my inheritance from Wilbur, also. Ah, how wonderful it is to be able to give it back to him! My father made a substantial bequest to Aunt Clara, his brother's widow, and several more to faithful servants and friends, while all the rest of his estate was to be divided between my brother and me. Do I make myself clear?"

"So clear, Miss Tudor, that you have given me the very last link I needed, the key to this tragedy! Don't you realize what that change of beds meant last night? Death to your cousin and life for you!"

Meet Responsibilities If You Would Be Real Success, Lawyer Says

Miss Florence King Has Income of $100,000 a Year Because She Made Up Her Mind to Do Work Ahead of Her.

By Roy Gibbons

Chicago — "Women must cease dodging responsibilities if they want to succeed."

"There are too many feminine feet on the highway of least resistance these days."

The speaker was Miss Florence King, the only woman patent attorney in the United States, and one of the very few women in the world whose yearly income is $100,000.

She has built up a national success on hard work.

COURT OF LOST DREAMS

Her office suite here is known as the court of lost dreams.

That's because so many inventors come to her with their products looking for patents.

Some get them. But many don't. For Miss King knows as much about machinery in addition to her law as perhaps any expert in the country.

Besides being an attorney she's also an electrical and mechanical engineer and a fully accredited member of the American Association of Engineers.

She is also the only woman admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court.

"I believe in women," she says.

"The sex has great possibilities before it."

"Women have heritages long latent because traditions and customs have suppressed them."

"A woman should make up her mind before entering upon a business or professional career and decide once and for all whether she intends to stick to it forever or throw over every-thing when responsibilities come, to hide behind the first matrimonial prospect happening her way."

"It's either career or marriage. The two won't mix."

Miss King's climb upward to the goal she has achieved was not an easy one.

Being just a lawyer looked too easy for her. So she decided to become a patent attorney, which necessitated studying two other professions—mechanical and electrical engineering—at the same time.

Miss King worked all day long in a law office for $6 a week and pursued her classes at night.

She's in the last of her forties now, dresses in a quiet unassuming manner and has a very convincing way when she speaks to anyone.

"Yes, it was a hard grind," she says. "I gave the best of my years to the career I had wanted since a tiny dot."

"But I won and am happy. Happy because I did it all by myself."

BRIGHT DANCING FROCK

By Marian Hale

New York—Dancing frocks are taking yards and yards of material into themselves and have something of an air of Spain and romance about them.

As the season progresses they are leaving the blackness and the whiteness of the winter and are going into brilliant hues which verily vie with summer sunsets.

Skirts are plainly lengthening too. This Claire frock, when Milady drops the bouffant skirts from her finger tips, reaches quite to the ankle and falls in lovely fully lines.

The upper part of the taffeta skirt is a brilliant rose tone, the lower part is black. And where the two colors meet one finds an interesting and exceedingly puffed fluting. A bit of Spanish lace trails across the plain rose colored bodice, veiling one shoulder and a part of the arm. The lace is caught at the waist line with a cluster of handsome roses.

St. Patrick Day Menu

ERHAPS you are planning to "pay back" all your winter social obligations on St. Patrick's Day. It's a delightful time for a party. Coming in Lent, the festivities must be in formal.

Luncheon, d i n e on evening party, use green for the color scheme. Light the dining table with candles and tie wide green bows on each centerpiece. White non-drip banquet candles will insure safety to the most exquisite linen. If a pot of shamrock is not procurable use a low maiden-hair fern for the centerpiece. These suggestions for an evening party menu may help you. The "eats" are planned to please both men and girls.

MENU FOR EVENING PARTY

St. Patrick's Sandwiches

Green Olives

Shamrock Salad

Mint Parfait

Irish Puff Balls

Four boiling water over fruit tablets and let stand till cool and tablets are dissolved. Add tea, cherries and orange juice. Pour over a block of ice and just before serving add water. This will serve 20 persons.

ST. PATRICK'S SANDWICHES

GREEN CHEESE FILLING—One bunch parsley, 1/2 bunch watercress, 2 packages Neufchatel cheese 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon white pepper.

Wash parsley and dry between towels. Pull the leaves from the stems and put on a large pie pan.

Dry in the oven until the leaves are crisp and crumbly. Wash and dry watercress. Mince and mix with crumbled parsley. Work cheese with butter if necessary. Season with salt and pepper and work parsley and crumbly bread and butter.

ley, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 hard-boiled egg yolk, salt and pepper.

Beat butter to a cream. Rub yolk of egg through fine sieve. Work into butter. Add lemon juice slowly, beating constantly. Beat in parsley, salt and pepper and work smooth.

If the parsley does not make the butter quite green enough work in a little spinach, cooked and rubbed through a sieve. This should be made in the morning and kept on ice till needed.

Chopped green olives and minced celery make good sandwich filling. Minced watercress and finely chopped whites of hard boiled eggs, seasoned with salt and pepper, oil and vinegar is good on white or brown bread.

Minced mint leaves, blanched shredded almonds and lemon juice to moisten make a toothsome green and white sandwich.

Shamrock salad is made with green peppers stuffed with cream cheese and nuts. The peppers are kept on ice for several hours and then cut in quart-inch slices and served on a bed of crisp with French dressing.

Irish puff balls are tiny cakes baked in round molds. Mix the rule for "Mock Angel Food" and bake in tiny spherical muffin pans. Cover with boiled frosting colored green.

MOCK ANGEL FOOD

One cup granulated sugar, 1 1/4 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 cup milk, 2 eggs (whites).

Sift flour and sugar four times. Add baking powder and sift again. Add salt and sift. Heat milk to the boiling point. Stir into dry ingredients. Add vanilla and fold in the whites of the eggs beaten stiff and dry with a whisk. Drop from teaspoon into buttered molds and bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven.

MINT PARFAIT

One bunch fresh mint, 1 1/2 cups sugar, 1/2 cup water, 2 eggs (whites), 2 cups whipping cream, 1/2 teaspoon salt.

Crush mint leaves and steep in boiling water 20 minutes. Strain and add water to sugar. Boil eight minutes. Beat egg whites till stiff and dry with a whisk. Beat till mixture begins to cool.

Whip cream, add salt and combine mixtures. Pour into mold, pack in ice and salt and freeze in a dasher less freezer. Allow four hours for freezing.

URSE JINGLES FOR EVERY LESSON FOR KIDDIES, SHE SAYS

New York Woman Says Rhythm Method of Living Will Prolong Life

By Ruth Abeling

New York — Winifred Sackville Stoner has just finished organization of the sixty-second neighborhood forum in New York City. At these forums Mrs. Stoner will teach mothers her theories of raising children by rhythm.

It is Mrs. Stoner's belief that being rhythmic prolongs life.

"If people were rhythmic," said Mother Stoner, "they could live to be 150 years old."

"This is a jazz age," she continued, "Jazz shortens life. It is worse than booze."

"Rhythm is the very fluid of existence. It is the foundation of all natural education."

"And that is why," said Mrs. Stoner, "I started from the very moment my daughter was born to teach her rhythm."

Mrs. Stoner's daughter is the Countess Bruche and during her childhood as Winifred Sackville Stoner, Jr., won world-wide fame as a prodigy.

"I am a jungle maniac, I have a jingle for everything, even jingles which tell the antidotes for poisons—and why not?" she queried. "Don't you remember the months by 'Tutty days' last September" and so on?

Didn't you learn it so when everything that way from babyhood on?"

"Environment is the architect of heredity," continued Mrs. Stoner.

"Toys are the architects of environment."

Thus, if a child is surrounded with rhythm and beauty in its toys from its earliest days, that child will be, come practically anything its mother wants it to become.

"Even a baby's rattle should be the loveliest toned one that can be found. There should be music and beauty about everything."

"And by that I'm not suggesting that every mother ought to sing her child to sleep at night. That might be inhuman. Some mothers sing their babies into a state of coma. They make them miserable by squawking at them."

"I would suggest for the mother who can't sing and has no canned music about the house, the reading of poetry to her baby at bedtime."

"I used that system with my daughter," said Mrs. Stoner, "and that is why at six months she talked at 17 months she wrote poetry at three years she published a book and by the time she was 17 she had published 17 books."

Mrs. Stoner's daughter is now 19.

"Rhythm did it," continued Mrs. Stoner, "and rhythm can do that for any mother's son or daughter."

"Children do not need to be spanked. They can be controlled by song suggestion. They can be made to eat the porridge they don't like by having music at their breakfast. They can be taught their letters and figures and to be graceful with music."

"A musical marmalade should take the place of the slipper."

PARAGUAY POSSESSES 2 NATIONAL TONGUES

Asuncion.—Paraguay, which is the smallest and most remote of the South American countries, is at the same time the only one that is the proud possessor of two national languages, both of which are official. One of them is Spanish and the other is Guaraní, or tongue of the partially civilized Indians who possessed the land before the arrival of the Spaniard. Guaraní is spoken everywhere, being heard on the streets as frequently as Spanish. The language is composed of short and snappy monosyllables.

Is Your Milk Pure and Safe?

As was announced in The Post-Crescent several weeks ago, the patrons of cheese factories in the Town of Greenville agreed among themselves to have their cows tested for tuberculosis, and after testing 23 herds they found so many afflicted with the disease, that the funds on hand to carry on the good work were exhausted, and the work had to be discontinued. It is said about 25 per cent of all the animals tested were afflicted. One very sad case was brought to light, where a family had used milk from one particular cow for a number of years for their own use in the family, and when that cow was tested it was found her case was a very severe one, and two children of that same family are in the Riverside Sanatorium today, afflicted with the same disease. Certainly a very sad case, and again proves that Bovine Tuberculosis is transmitted to the human body, and proves the necessity of using SAFE MILK. The old adage still holds true, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Use "CONTAMO-TESTED" Pasteurized Milk. It is absolutely PURE and SAFE.

Adventures of the Twins

Oliver Edwards Barton

Daddy's Advice

The Green Shoes were in a second and the Twins turned their attention to a funny little house of rough boards, snugged away up in the top branches of a big apple tree.

The little house had been there ever since they could remember and had been a constant source of curiosity and chatter because they were not allowed to climb up and investigate its mysteries.

"No," Daddy had said over and over, "As I was the carpenter for the little board house when I was a youngster, I know how wobbly it is. I don't know how the old thing holds together at all after so many years."

"So be satisfied with pretending that it's a fairy elevator or a witch's haunt, or whatever you like, kiddies. That's just as much fun and far less dangerous. By the time two healthy youngsters like you would add your weight to the poor rickety thing, with all its nails falling out, it wouldn't last two minutes!"

And so there was nothing left to do but take Daddy's advice and pretend. They pretended that the old house in the tree was everything from the Turk's Flying Trunk to Snow-White's Crystal Casket, where the prince found her and took her for his bride.

But the house had remained a mystery. There was a doorway (with no door), and there was a smaller window cut in the side. Yet the little house remained a secret, for mortal eyes could not see within.

"Don't you see, Nancy?" said Nick. "The Mushroom must have heard us wishing to get up to the little house and he's asked the Fairy Queen to give us the Magic Shoes. Let's hurry and put them on. Daddy won't mind now, I'm sure."

Flapper Comes From All Walks, Bathhouse Says

Chicago.—Alderman "Bathhouse" John Coughlin has definite ideas about flappers. He defined them as follows: "A flapper is a youthful female, beautiful externally, base internally, superficially intelligent, imitative to high degree. Her natural habitat is the cabaret, the ballroom and the boulevard, the fast motor car. She brouses about the trough of learning, picking at its tidbits smart phrases which it glibly repeats without fully sensing their meanings. She comes from all walks of life and has for its main requirement nerve, a face and figure either actually beautiful or susceptible to artistic effort."

Ivory handled dressing room articles, or towels worn, often get yellow. You can clean these well by the use of very fine emery paper. This will remove all the spots and restore the original whiteness.

Philadelphia.—Pin Chu, a Chinese from Canton and now a student at the architectural school of the University of Pennsylvania, has won an architectural prize in competition with hundreds of students representing the largest universities in the United States.

The prize was awarded by the Beaux Arts Institute, New York, for Pin Chu's design representing a Chinese gateway.

"After a proper amount of western science can be imported into China, that, with Chinese conception and expression, will make Chinese architecture unsurpassable," Pin Chu says.

Seek Dempsey's Title

By Billy Evans

Who will be Jack Dempsey's next opponent?

Harry Willis has already qualified as a contender.

His quick knockout of Kid Norfolk in the second round of the fight, proved that Willis packs a punch.

Tommy Gibbons, prominently mentioned as the logical opponent for Champion Dempsey is to be put to the acid test March 13.

On that date Gibbons will clash with Harry Greb of Pittsburgh at Madison Square Garden in New York. This bout should be a whale of an affair.

Greb won't weigh over 155 pounds, but this won't even get them in the big money when the cash list is split up.

Jimmy Smith and his famous cowlorker, "Doc" Elkie failed to burn up the alleys while other members of the team were away under form. Crack bowling squads generally fall by the wayside in national pin classics.

STRIKES AND SPARES

John Kluwin, president of the Fox River Valley Baseball league, rolled in the Elks tournament Friday. He was a member of the Clippers that shot into third place in the five-man event. Mr. Kluwin hit 843 pins in the five-man event, 560 in doubles and 528 in singles.

The Oshkosh bowlers rolled high all during the session and placed well in all the events. H. Bestler and J. Genol, the first men on the alleys for the session, shot a total of 1,147 pins in doubles, taking sixth place. They were sent farther down the line, however, when other Oshkosh maple busters got on the drives.

A. Wendland hit for a total of 246 in his second singles game, hanging up the third highest mark of the tournament. The high score is 254 and the second highest is 247. Mr. Wendland had good scores all the way through. In the five-man event he hit for counts of 202, 230, 198 in singles he scored 184, 246 and 175, and in doubles his marks were 192, 167 and 153.

Interest in the tournament is growing and at every session the bleachers are crowded with spectators. The largest crowd of the classic saw the Oshkosh bowlers shoot at the prizes Friday night.

C. Natwick of Wisconsin Rapids, who rolled for a score of 254 Thursday night in a doubles game, setting the highest score this far in the tournament, rolled in championship form at times and at other times fell way off. In the five-man event he hit 161, 212 and 158, in the doubles he scored 200, 200 254, while in singles he battered pins for counts of 176, 190 and 179.

Tournament bowling Saturday started at 8 o'clock in the morning with Manitowish five-man teams on the drives and will continue until after 11 o'clock at night with Milwaukee maple busters rolling the five-man event in the final shift of the day.

The alleys will receive a constant pounding again Sunday. Bowling will start at 8 o'clock in the morning with Marshfield shooters going after the prize money in the five-man event, and continuing until 10 o'clock at night with Madison pin smashers winding up the Sunday shifts on the hard wood paths.

Smith's Arcades, one of the greatest bowling aggregations in Milwaukee, fell down badly in the A. B. C. tournament at Toledo. The much feared Cream City tribe counter 2,790, but this won't even get them in the big money when the cash list is split up. Jimmy Smith and his famous cowlorker, "Doc" Elkie failed to burn up the alleys while other members of the team were away under form. Crack bowling squads generally fall by the wayside in national pin classics.

If an improper batsman goes to the plate with the count two balls and two strikes on him the team at bat discovers that he is the wrong batter what is the proper method of handling such a situation?

If before an improper batsman hits safely or is retired it is discovered that he is batting out of order it is always possible to substitute the proper batsman. The proper batsman takes the count that exists on the improper batsman. In the case you cite the proper batsman would take his place with two balls and two strikes on him.

It is positively correct. The base runner must have in mind two things in the case you cite. He must protect himself from being doubled up in case the ball is caught. Likewise in case it falls safe, he must be in a position that will enable him to make the greatest possible advance. Taking into consideration his own speed, and the strength of the throwing arm of the fielder making a play on the ball, he must decide just what is the proper lead to take off the bag.

Check Fowler will hold down Babe Ruth's place in left field until the Yankee star is reinstated.

OSMAN DEFEATS NEBRASKA STAR IN FAST MATCH

Chicago Man, Substituting for Hill, Easily Beats Herman Hackenschmidt

Wrestling with dazzling speed—clamping on hold after hold in rapid succession—and showing a fast and marvelous defense, Karl Osman, 19 year old grappler of Chicago, defeated Herman Hackenschmidt, veteran heavyweight mat star of Beaver City, Neb., two falls out of three in the main event of a wrestling show staged Friday night in Armory G arena. Osman took the first fall in eight minutes with a head scissors and bar arm. Hackenschmidt won the second fall in fourteen minutes and ten seconds with a toe hold and Osman pinned Hackenschmidt's shoulders to the mat for the third fall with a head scissors and bar arm.

Osman substituted for George Hill against the Nebraska man. Hill twisted his knee while working out Friday morning and was unable to wrestle. The Appleton athlete introduced from the ring before the main event. His knee was swollen to twice its normal size.

SPEEDY WRESTLING

Osman and Hackenschmidt were sent on their way at 9:04 by Referee Barney Rhodes. After pawing around the ring for three minutes they went to the mat with Osman behind Hackenschmidt. Then followed some of the fastest wrestling ever seen in an Appleton arena. The men rolled and struggled over the mat and crowded action into every minute of the battle. Osman was constantly behind his opponent and several times had Hackenschmidt in trouble.

After a few seconds more than seven minutes of grappling Osman clamped the head scissors and bar arm on Hackenschmidt and gradually pulled the Nebraska man's shoulders to the mat for the first fall.

They came back strong for the second fall. Hackenschmidt was sent to the mat in full speed. They went to the mat in less than a minute, with Osman behind his man. Hackenschmidt broke loose and the men came to their feet but went to the mat again with the Nebraska man behind Osman. They battled and struggled over the mat with Osman having the better of the tussle.

Osman put a bar arm and head scissors on Hackenschmidt but the veteran broke loose and bothered the Chicago boy with a toe hold. Osman broke the hold and put Hackenschmidt on the defensive with a series of holds that had the Nebraska wrestler worried. Hackenschmidt went behind Osman and tried to pull him down. Osman was unable to continue the fast pace and soon tired. While Hackenschmidt slowed down Osman went faster. He had all the best of the going and after nine minutes clamped on the head scissors and bar arm that brought Hackenschmidt's shoulders to the mat.

Osman weighed in before the match at 186 pounds. Hackenschmidt tipped the beam at 195 pounds.

Four preliminaries preceded the main event. Young Johnston defeated Young Bender in straight falls. They weighed in at 90 pounds. Young Byrne and Young Clark wrestled seven minutes to a draw in the 125 pound class. Billy Johnson and Kid Calvinist went seven minutes to a draw in the 145 pound class. Jack Cole won one fall from Young Colburn in the heavyweight class.

A small crowd witnessed the struggles. It was announced that a wrestling program will be given on March 21 in which George Hill will meet a face opponent. Announcement was made that an effort is being made to have Stranger Lewis meet Hill here in April.

NEBRASKAN TIES

The men came out of their corners for the third fall determined to end the match in a hurry. They flew at each other at the call of time and were on the mat in a few seconds. Osman set the pace and immediately took the offensive, keeping behind his opponent. The Nebraska wrestler was unable to continue the fast pace and soon tired. While Hackenschmidt slowed down Osman went faster. He had all the best of the going and after nine minutes clamped on the head scissors and bar arm that brought Hackenschmidt's shoulders to the mat.

FEW BUSHERS ARE TO GET JOBS WITH BIG LEAGUE TEAMS

Most of the Big Time Squads Are Pretty Much the Same as Last Year

By Henry L. Farrell

New York—Spring never is complete without the discovery of a couple of Cobb's successors. Speakers and a rookie Ruth of two.

These usual harbingers of the season, however, are missing this year as there seems to be only a fair quality of rookie sporting around in the south.

Out of the flocks and flocks of youngsters trying for jobs with the sixteen major league clubs, only a few will land regular places where a plug in some vital weakness is imperative.

John McGraw has to have a centerfielder because he hasn't a regular player for the position, so one of the Giant rookies is sure of the job.

Miller Huggins is facing the same problem to get two outfielders for his Yankees until Ruth and Meusel serve their time. Two rookies may step in there for six weeks.

College men are represented by an unusual number of candidates and it will be interesting to watch how the theory of the old timers works out that they all have to be polished on the small time.

The Cincinnati Reds will break out this season with an infield imported from California and the personnel of the club will show many changes.

The Giants are the same as the 1921 champions with the exception of Heinie Groh and a new middle gardener, Ralph Shimmers, the high priced Indianapolis youngster and Bill Cunningham, the husky Pacific coast fly chaser, are likely candidates as George Burns' successors.

The Yankees have several new faces on their pitching staff—Jones, Bush, etc., and a new shortstop, Everett Scott. The Red Sox have three or four new faces and the Cleveland Indians have several strange names on the payroll. Washington has a couple of new ones and the Boston Braves have Marquard and Kopf as new comers.

Kid Gleason is much pleased with the showing that Pitcher Leverette is making. The Sox secured him from Fort Smith, Ark.

EAGLES DEFEAT ARCADE BOWLERS

Rolling for a total of 2,600 pins to 2,513 for their opponents, the Eagle Cardinals defeated the Arcades Friday night on the Eagle drives in the first of a series of match games. The second of the series will be rolled Thursday night on the Arcade alleys. The scores follow:
